

Step up at ACRM

There's no one path. There are many ways and various possible routes to getting involved at ACRM and making the most of your membership.

The foundation of ACRM is based on a collaborative culture where everyone knows and appreciates the value of team science and the benefits of inter-professional collaboration. This is what makes ACRM special.

We believe in helping one another regardless of job title and rank. We believe in the need to translate the research to practice faster. And we believe the best way to do this is in person at the Annual Conference and through a network of community groups tied together with common goals. (Please see other side).

"I have been a part of the ACRM community since my postdoc, and I attend the annual meeting every year to discover new rehabilitation directions. I identified my mentors for a career development award and obtained pilot funding for multiple projects through ACRM meetings and unprecedented support from leaders at the ACRM."

—ALEX WONG, PhD, Washington University School of Medicine
